Windmill Draws the NTMFA" activity.

The activity, which kicked off on December 24, 2005, at the NTMFA, is based on an installation art concept, fusing dramatic and narrative elements and centered on the theme of reading illustrated books. The installation draws on images from all of the major continents to present a kind of global journey. There are also over 3,000 books at the first floor entrance, including titles on such topics as spiritual exploration, dreams, chivalry and justice, adventure, illustrated books from the East, Taiwan folk stories, and animals. Flags and illustrations from the various represented countries are displayed along the museum's spiral staircase. The main reading are is divided into eight theme areas, including: the Polar Igloo Area, Fairytale Pumpkin Area, European Castle, African Jungle Area, Australian Kangaroo Area, American Sports Car Area, Asia Scenic Area, and Taiwan Area. The activity space has a capacity limit of 60 and it is estimated that 150,000 people will visit in a year.

The display's emphasis is on interactivity, art and education promotion, and high-tech integration. In addition to expanding the worldview of kids in Taiwan, the display seeks to promote reading concepts.
